Building Solidarity for a Just Transition

Can a Labour-Climate Alliance Transform the Palm Oil Sector?

The global palm oil industry is based on exploitation of people and nature. A transformation towards an environmentally and socially just model is urgently needed.

This evening brings together international representatives from trade unions and the climate justice movement. It builds on experiences from Indonesia and Germany of building alliances for a just transition in different sectors. A panel discussion asks for the role of international solidarity and European actors to promote this transformation towards an environmentally and socially just palm oil sector.
